Chapter 9 is a continuation of the principles governing eating meat that had been sacrificed to idols.

Some brethren at Corinth thought :

1- it was wrong to eat meat sacrificed to idols

2- while others believed that it was perfectly acceptable with God to do so.

3- Some were certain that the meat offered to idols was contaminated by the pagan gods.

4- Others believed that the meat was not contaminated at all because an idol is nothing.

They knew that there was only one true and living God.

Paul was certain that the strong brother had the freedom or right to eat the meat.

He was just as certain that the knowledgeable brother must practice love and abstain from anything that would cause a weak brother to stumble (8:1-2)

Christian liberty cannot provide a reason to act unloving. 1Co_8:13,

Paul used himself as an example of this principle.

1Co 9:5-10 [illegible], [illegible], [illegible], [illegible]? [illegible], [illegible]? The objection here seems to have been, that Paul and Barnabas were unmarried, or at least that they traveled without wives. The objectors urged that others had wives, and that they took them with them, and expected provision to be made for them as well as for themselves. They therefore showed that they felt that they had a claim to support for their families. But Paul and Barnabas had no families. And the objectors inferred that they were conscious that they had no claim to the apostleship, and no right to support. To this Paul replies as before, that they had a right to do as others did, but they chose not to do it for other reasons than that they were conscious
